Election Fraud In Antrim County

MIRS News Service - Lansing, MI

An Antrim County judge on Monday, Jan. 11th, 2021 declined to conceal the identities of "forensic investigators" behind a report concluding Dominion Voting tabulators are purposefully designed with inherent errors to create fraud in election results. In a separate lawsuit, the U.S. Supreme Court denied requests for expedited hearings in lawsuits filed in Michigan and other states by Trump campaign allies seeking to overturn the election.

Attorney General Dana NESSEL praised both decisions, saying her office is preparing an order for the Antrim judge and she fully expects the plaintiff, William BAILEY, and his attorney to provide the names. "The Supreme Court's decision puts another nail in the coffin on the bogus claims of widespread fraud in Michigan's election," she said. "Interestingly, the Antrim County,....."

'analysis' was provided to the Supreme Court and it failed to persuade them to take any early action. It is time to put the election litigation behind us and move forward with a smooth transition to President-elect (Joe) Biden and his administration," Nessel added.

In December, Bailey's attorney, Matthew DePerno, sought the release of the report, but he later asked Circuit Court Judge Kevin Elsenheimer to issue a protective order barring the Secretary of State and Nessel's office from disclosing the names of those involved in the analysis.

Judge Elsenheimer concluded that barring release would be "extraordinary" as the expert witnesses' names are a matter of court record.

The report does bear the name of Russell James Ramsland Jr., a presumed cyber-security analyst and former Republican congressional candidate. (See "Report Alleges 'Intentional' Fraud In Antrim County; AG, SOS Says It's Not Credible Evidence," 12/14/20.)

In King v. Whitmer, attorney Sidney Powell wanted the federal court to de-certify the state's election results due to alleged election-fraud, conspiracy-laden arguments that no judge has validated. ("Judge Calls Request To Overturn MI Election Results; Stunning,...Breathtaking," 12/7/20).

Antrim County Times - Bellaire, MI

Attorney, Matthew DePerno of Portage is representing Central Lake Twp. resident, William Bailey, in his voter fraud election case against Antrim County.

On December 14, 2020, ASOG released its preliminary forensics report on the 2020 election held in Antrim County.

Notably, the report found on November 4, 2020 at 11:03 PM, certain system files and adjudication logs were deleted.

On Monday, January 11, 2021, Antrim County 13th Circuit Court Judge - Kevin Elsenheimer, ordered MI's Secretary of State - Jocelyn Benson to produce all of the correspondence and documents between her office and Dominion Voting Systems, Election Source, the Michigan House of Representatives and Senate, U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate, Google, Amazon, Apple, and Facebook regarding the 2020 election.

The court ordered document production is due on Monday, Feb. 1, 2021. Based on the Secretary of State's oral request for 3-weeks to produce these items, it is anticipated that the production will be substantial.

"Criminal charges in Antrim County could be coming soon", DePerno said.
